Here are some signs that your marriage may be in trouble:

- You no longer feel close to your spouse.
- You don't communicate effectively.
- You argue constantly.
- You've lost interest in sex.
- You're considering divorce.

If you're experiencing any of these signs, it's important to seek help from a marriage counselor or therapist. A therapist can help you identify the problems in your marriage and develop strategies for resolving them. With the right help, you can save your marriage and rekindle the love you once shared.

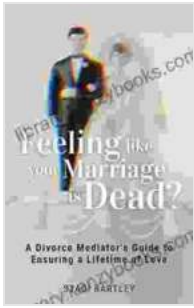

Here are some tips for saving your marriage:

- Talk to your spouse about your concerns.
- Be honest and open with each other.
- Be willing to compromise.
- Spend quality time together.
- Try new things together.
- Be patient and persistent.

Saving a marriage is not easy, but it is possible. With the right help and effort, you can rekindle the love you once shared and build a stronger, more fulfilling relationship.

If you're feeling like your marriage is dead, don't give up. There is hope. With the right help, you can save your marriage and rekindle the love you once shared.

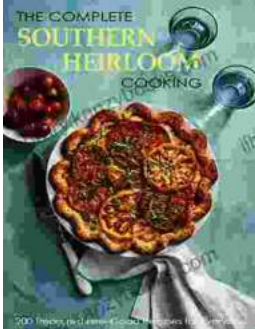

To learn more about how to save your marriage, I recommend reading the book Feeling Like Your Marriage Is Dead? by Dr. John Gottman. This book provides practical advice and proven strategies for saving your marriage and rekindling the love you once shared.
