What is population health?

Population health is the health of a defined group of people, such as a community, a state, or a nation. It is determined by a wide range of factors, including:

- **Social determinants of health**, such as poverty, education, and access to healthcare
- **Environmental factors**, such as air pollution and water quality

- Behavioral factors, such as smoking, drinking, and physical activity
- Genetic factors

Population health is important because it affects the overall health and well-being of a community. Poor population health can lead to increased healthcare costs, reduced productivity, and social unrest.

What is population health management?

Population health management (PHM) is a systematic approach to improving the health of a defined population. PHM programs use data and analytics to identify and address the health needs of the population. They also work to improve access to healthcare, reduce health disparities, and promote healthy behaviors.

What is the Population Health Alliance?

The Population Health Alliance (PHA) is a non-profit organization dedicated to improving population health. The PHA provides resources, training, and support to organizations that are working to improve the health of their communities.
