

Things We All Did As Noobs

We've all been there. We start playing a new video game, and we're immediately overwhelmed by all the new information and mechanics. We don't know what we're doing, and we make all sorts of mistakes. But that's all part of the learning process.

In this article, we're going to take a look back at some of the things we all did as noobs. We'll laugh at our past mistakes, and we'll learn from them so that we can become better gamers.

1. Died a lot

One of the most common things that noobs do is die a lot. This is because they don't know the game mechanics well enough to avoid danger. They may also not be very good at aiming or controlling their character.

If you're dying a lot, don't worry. It's all part of the learning process. Just keep playing and practicing, and you'll eventually get better.

2. Used the wrong weapons

Another common mistake that noobs make is using the wrong weapons. They may not know which weapons are good for different situations, or they may not know how to use them effectively.

If you're not sure which weapons to use, check out the game's manual or online resources. You can also experiment with different weapons to see which ones you like best.

3. Ignored the tutorials

Many games have tutorials that teach you the basics of the game. However, many noobs skip these tutorials, thinking that they know enough already. This is a mistake.

Tutorials can teach you valuable information about the game's mechanics, controls, and objectives. They can also help you avoid common mistakes.

4. Got lost

Getting lost is another common problem for noobs. This can happen in open-world games, where there are no clear paths to follow. It can also happen in linear games, if you take a wrong turn.

If you get lost, don't panic. Just open your map and see where you are. You can also use the game's compass or GPS to help you find your way.

5. Bought the wrong items

In many games, you can buy items to help you progress. However, noobs often buy the wrong items, either because they don't know what they need or because they don't have enough money.

Before you buy an item, make sure you know what it does and how it will help you. You should also check the price to make sure you can afford it.

6. Joined the wrong team

In multiplayer games, you often have to choose a team to join. Noobs often join the wrong team, either because they don't know which team is better or because they want to be on the same team as their friends.

When choosing a team, it's important to consider your play style and the team's overall strategy. You should also make sure that you're joining a team that you'll have fun playing with.

7. Made bad decisions

Noobs often make bad decisions, either because they don't know any better or because they're in a hurry. This can lead to them losing the game, getting killed, or wasting valuable resources.

Before you make a decision, take a moment to think about the consequences. Consider all of your options and choose the one that you think is best.

8. Got frustrated and quit

Finally, many noobs get frustrated and quit playing the game. This is often because they're not having fun, they're not making progress, or they're just not good at the game.

If you're getting frustrated, take a break from the game and come back later. You may also want to try playing a different game or finding a different team to play with.

We've all been noobs at one point or another. We've all made mistakes and learned from them. The important thing is to keep playing and practicing, and you'll eventually become a better gamer.

So don't be afraid to embrace your noobiness. It's all part of the learning process. Just have fun and enjoy the ride.
